The 27th Cambridge International Symposium on Economic Crime

The Enemy Within – internal threats to the stability and integrity of financial institutions

This year the Cambridge International Symposium on Economic will celebrate its twenty-seventh year. It is a testament to the Symposium’s unique blend of relevance, practicality and topicality that over the years it has enjoyed the support of so many institutions and experts around the world. It also attests to the realisation on the part of governments and financial and other institutions as to the extent of the risks thrown up by economic crime and in particular organised crime to stability and security.

The annual Cambridge Symposium is a truly unique event which over the years has made an unrivalled contribution to understanding the real issues involved in preventing and controlling economically motivated serious crime. As a respected international forum and network it has also made an impressive and meaningful contribution to fostering international cooperation and promoting mutual understanding and goodwill.

The Twenty-Seventh programme is rather special in that it is set in the context of one of the most serious financial crises that the world has had to face. Last year’s programme entitled ‘Banking on Trouble’ was particularly prescient. Obviously the present situation is not the result of a single or even predominate cause. However, it is equally obvious that abusive dealings, self-interest and worse have exacerbated the problems.

While the clamour for accountability may in many instances be too late, an increase in regulatory and enforcement activity is inevitable. It is also the case that more and more evidence of serious economically motivated crime is coming to light as the international recession deepens. The new regulatory systems that will be brought into operation, both domestically and internationally will inevitably place much greater emphasis on ensuring integrity and sanctioning those who abuse their positions of trust. This has implications for us all.

The Symposium brings together in one of the oldest medieval Colleges within the University of Cambridge, ministers, legislators, senior officials, diplomats, judges, regulators, law enforcement, intelligence and security officers, financial intermediaries, bankers, professional advisers, compliance and risk officers and scholars from around the world. It regularly attracts well over 900 participants from 80 or so different countries – many of whom return year after year.

The Twenty-Seventh Symposium will focus on the threats confronting financial institutions from within. The extent of serious risks from inside institutions as a result of penetration and internal misconduct has long been recognised by financial regulators. The European Union has identified this as a major threat to financial stability. In the present crisis this threat is all the more immediate and serious. Our programme which consists of keynote and plenary sessions, supported by numerous workshops, will address those areas of risk thrown up not just by crime and terror, but also our responses to such threats, in the context of protecting and creating wealth. This year we will give particular attention to initiatives designed to address the problems resulting from corruption, penetration and fraud. However, there will also be a focus on the impact of highly profitable crimes on the system and in particular those who are responsible for minding other people’s wealth. In the result the programme provides a unique opportunity at a very practical level, to share the experiences of over 300 specialist speakers and panellists in the prevention and control of risks to the integrity of the financial system, government and our societies.

The programme is structured to provide a depth and breadth of opportunity, second to none, for those participating in the programme to become aware not only of existing, but also new threats, and how best to address them. Through the numerous plenary and other workshops and in particular the considerable opportunities to meet colleagues socially, there is a degree of inter-action and collaboration that could only be encountered in an institution that has a record for promoting learning and research which is second to none. The University of Cambridge, with collaborating institutions throughout the world, is able to offer a wholly different experience in addressing these fundamentally important issues.

The Cambridge Symposium is not and has never been just a conference. It is organised on a non-profit making basis by some of the world’s most respected academic and research institutions with the active involvement and support of numerous governmental and inter-governmental organisations. It was established twenty-seven years ago to promote meaningful international co-operation – in the fight against financial crime. Its record is its best testament. Successive symposia have made a real contribution – at all levels, to promoting stability, good governance and the disruption and control of serious crime and terror. Those who are concerned to protect and promote the integrity and wellbeing of their national economy, institution or enterprise – or who are concerned to better understand the risks facing business today, cannot afford to miss this special event.

Jesus College, Cambridge and the University of Cambridge

Jesus College was founded as a college, within the University of Cambridge, in 1496 by Bishop Alcock of Ely. The history of the College is, however, rather more ancient. An order of nuns occupied the site and buildings for at least two hundred and fifty years before this. Since the inception of the annual Cambridge Symposium, twenty-seven years ago by Professor Barry Rider, the Master and Fellows of the College have been pleased to host the event and the College administers all financial matters pertaining to the programme.

The earliest record of the University of Cambridge is in 1209 so the University is celebrating its 800 anniversary this year. The University consisting of over 100 departments, faculties and schools has a deserved international reputation for excellence. A number of the University’s centres and programmes are involved in supporting the annual Cambridge Symposium on Economic Crime.

Principal Organising Institutions

The Centre for International Documentation on Economic and Organised Crime (CIDOEC)
CIDOEC was established as a non-profit making organisation in 1988 to promote collaborative and comparative research in the prevention and control of organised and economic crime. It is based in Cambridge, although it has branches in southern Africa, North America, Latin America and the Far East. The Chairman of CIDOEC’s Advisory Board is Mr Saul M Froomkin QC, a former Attorney General of Bermuda.

The Institute of Advanced Legal Studies and the Society for Advanced Legal Studies
The IALS was established in 1947 and is a constituent member of the School for Advanced Study of the University of London. Although part of the University of London, the Institute’s role is national, and is funded by government on this basis. Its library is the national law library and the Institute's research staff is concerned with promoting and conducting research across a broad spectrum of legal and related issues. The Institute’s Advisory Council is chaired by The Rt Hon The Lord Hope of Craighead, Lord of Appeal in Ordinary. The Society for Advanced Legal Studies is a registered charity concerned with promoting collaborative research between practising lawyers, academics and those involved in the administration of justice in Britain and elsewhere. The Society’s Advisory Council is chaired by The Rt Hon The Lord Scott of Foscote, Lord of Appeal in Ordinary.

The International Association of Anti-Corruption Authorities
The IAACA was established by resolution of a number of governments at a meeting hosted by the Prosecutor General of China in Beijing in October 2006. The primary objective of the IAACA is to facilitate the effective implementation of the UN Convention against Corruption and assist governments generally in fighting corruption and corruption related crime. The IAACA’s Secretary General is Dr Ye Feng of the Supreme People’s Procuratorate of China.

A complete list of all the organisations around the world supporting the annual Cambridge Symposium is to be found on page 2 of this programme
